himself on that day if he had not succeeded in obtaining it, the rest of the captives being hostages for the fulfillment of his promise. He had come to a new settlement with the brigands, who now consented to take £25,000 it paid in gold before Stutrday. He states that the brigands are 30 in number, belonging to the well-known band of Arvanitake, all young, hardy, daring-looking men. The oldest among them, the chief, is hardly more than 30 years of age. They treated their prisoners with overy courtesy, and danced before them Greek national dances for their amusement when they bivousked

There he had left them as arranged, with a guide provided by the brigands, who had conducted him to a village placed him in a village cart in charge of a village boy, and left him to be driven thus into Athens. Lord Muncaster says the money must be got ready corore Saturday, or else he will have to return to the brigands.

Mr. Erskine is doing all he can to procure the ransom, but it is not an easy thing to get £25,000 in gold in Athens at a moment's notice, and it has rather produced a commotion in the money market. There are a great many Americans here just at present, as this is the sensen for the village. and stopped them. They seized the horses hads an 'm a winkling had kneeked the drivers from their seats, and unhorsed and secured the gendurmes before they could fire a single shot. Resistance indeed was useless. One of them tried to free himself and draw has pisted from his holsterers, when his horse was shot under him, and rolling with it to the ground he was seized and bound in a minute. The brigands then polityly asked the ladies and gentlemen to alight and in the carriages and follow them. The put, alighted and each prisoner was given in char to to a brigand, who walked by his ance aring gun ready cocked. They were marched off at a quick pace, coachmen, servouts, guides, and gendarmes following under similar escort, and leaving the earlings on the rold. No attempt had been made to search them or make in gold, and that steps should be taken to prevent the Greek government from sending any troops in pursuit of them, for the brigands declared positively that as soon 'as they saw any troops, their first step would be to behead their captives and then effect their own escape. Mr. Herbert added that from their position on the hill they commanded the whole of the plain for miles around, and that each brigand was provided with a first-rate spy-glass. This letter was given to Lady Muncaster to take with her, and the two ladies and little girl (Miss Lloyd) set out.

The news of the capture was first brought to Athens by one of the groems stationed on the road with a relay of horses. The King and Queen are absent traveling in the Island of the Archipelago, and the Prime Minister Zaimis is with them The rest of the Ministers held a Cabinet Council on hearing the news, and declared that a strong detachment of troops should be sent out in pursuit of the brigands.

The oversack now in almost univer is cut single-breasted, with a to button close up, or be thrown may be desired.
Undersacks are so little worn a no mention.

In the line of undercoats, the business frock or English walking coat are in general style—made to close by one button, or button all the way up if desired. Although the single-breasted walking coat is in use, the double-breasted frock is the favorite of all others. It

The dress or swallow-tailed cost, is made very similar in the body to the frock, and is also short in the skirt. The most recent innovation on the sedate black is the blue dress cost with the immemorial brass buttons, which, like comets, appear and disappear at intervals of fifteen or twenty years.

The following morning a second letter arrived, addressed by the brigands themselves to Mr. Eratine, the British Minister, in which they stock that the

The present style of hats are the time-honored silk, with a wide rolling rim, and a crown slightly beit shape. The principal change is in extending the rim a triffs in width over the hat of last season. For a spring business hat the round top style prevails. The heat of summer, will of course bring the light plush, slate-colored cassimere and the perennial Panama.

The feet are now incased in shoes, boots being worn but little. They are made wide on the bottom, with ample soles we I extending from under the uppers, and with round toes. Sime attempts have been made to introduce the square toe, but without success. The material most-HATS, BOOTS AND SHOES.

The cable tolegraph has given the tragic termination of the story, the first part of which is thus told by a correspondent of the New York Tribune:

The day before yesterday a party of Englishmen—Lord and Ludy Muncaster, Mr. Vining, Ludy Muncaster consin, Mr. Herbert, Secretary of the British Legation here; Mr. Lloyd, an English lawyer, connected with the Athens and Pieus Railway, with his wife and child, and Count way, with his wife and child, and Coun Boyl, Secretary of the Italian Legation— started to visit the Plain of Marathon, es to know whather the rumors about brig-ands were true or not, and whether the roads were secure. In reply, the tour gen-darmes had been sent to escort them, with an assurance that the country about Athens was perfectly safe, and brigands a bugbear invented by foreignors. The party drove out of Athens at 6 in the morung in two carriages, visited Mara-thon, and were returning at shout 2 in the Ratina Bridge about 12 miles from Athens. Shortly after they had started from Marathon they had net a parrel of soldiers headed by a well known leader, an exbrigard, called Mista, who had offered to accompany them, and in fact done so for a short time; but his men being on not and unable to keep up-with the carriage, they had soon been distanced and were far behind. When the carriage reached the ratine 's at they's bunditti sprang forth and stopped them. They seized the horses he ads an 'un a winkling had knocked the drivers from their seats, and unhorsed and

As they walked brakely up the rugged brushwood-grown stope of M. As. Inthicus, suddenly the chief of the band, on a sign from one of his scouts, turned round and ordered the prisoners to lie fat on the ground and not breathe a word if they valued their lives. The occasion of this sunden measure seems to have been that the scout had descried the patrol headed by Milas coming along the road.

Presently they were told to rise again, and they proceeded up the hill, walking fast over rocks and rolling stones, the ladies with great difficulty climbing the rough hill-ide and tearing through the thick brushwood covering it, while Mr. Lloyd, who had to carry his little girl in his atms, struggled hard to keep up with the rapid pace. Two fell grouning to the ground, the one with a ball through the jaw and another through the side, and the other with a broken thigh and a wound in the shoulder. The other two, not wounded, fell on their kness and begged for mercy in the name of their wives and children. The chief ordered them to rise and more fast; and the party, horror-stricken with the incident, marched on again, leaving the two wounded men lying on the ground, where they were picked up some time after and brought to town. The capture of a party of English gen-emen and ladies, by a gang of Greek irands and their subsequent murder i cold blood are rather startling events for travelers in Greece. The party comprised Lord and Lady Muncaster, Mr. Vyning, Mr. Herbert, Secretary of the British Em-beary in Greece, Mr. Lloyd, an English lawyer, with his wife and child, and bassy. . They left Athens in two carriages attended by some gens id'armes furnished by the government for their protection. On the return of the party, they were sudsprang upon them from a ravine about 12

A tragedy so dismal has not for a long time taken place in any part of the world. It touches the interests of every civilized land; for the people of every land travel in Greece. During the last month there were in Athens upwards of a hundred Americans. The event, as might be imagined, has made a very deep impression in Great Britain, and public indignation is profoundly stirred. It has been made a master of enquiry in the House of Commons, and the London Times says that "thas filled up the cup of Greek misgovernment. It has exhausted the patience of Europe." The Times declares that England spent nine millions sterling for the humiliation of Aby-sints for a keep provocation, and it demands that measures be taken by the three Powers to which Greece owes her independence und her protection, to put a stop to such outgree—letter which was copied in the newspapers all over the country, and extensively circulated as a campaign documber of the country in the world. The Secretary of the Interior has is sued a circular to census marshals, stating that all materials for schedules one two, three and four must be obtained by personal inquiry of the assistant marshal at each house, farm, shop, &c., of his subdivision. Social statistics, on the other hand, may be obtained, as far as possible, from the published reports or the manuscript records of schools, colleges, prisons, poor houses, &c. Deputies may be appointed to work up social statistics, receiving compensation at the rate of two per cent upon the amount paid for the enumeration of inhabitants. A DELEGATION of brewers from Pittsburgh called on the Commissioner of Internal Revenue Saturday, in regard to the proposed enforcement of the law of Congrees allowing only one bunghole to a lager barrel. The custom prevalent of late of drawing ale or beer from casks by means of ale pumps has necessitated the opening of an additional bunghole, with which, as vet, there has been no official interference. But the Pittsburgh brewers, having been notified by the Collector of Internal Revenue there that the law would be strictly enforced after the first of July next, and having a large stock on hand, complain that the transferring of the ale to its quality, and ask protection only so is concerned. They were informed by Aser Douglas that it was a case without the jurisdiction of the department, and that additional legislation by Congress could alone supply the desired remedy.

THE New York Times reports the number of buyers of goods from the country as larger than usual for the close of Apri and the beginning of May, and the dry goods importers and domestic commiss men, as a rule, are doing better than at the close of March. Domestic cotton goods have especially improved in demand. On the Corn Exchange the prices of grain are ooking up, and the export orders for wheat are on the increase. There are known to be large supplies of old grain in the West, and as the spring has been faable for sowing the new crop, it only equires moderate encouragement to bring these supplies forward.

We are informed by one of the owners of the disputed tract, that they purchased this land last March on the assurance of the Surveyor General of the State, and upon other authority, that they were entitled to it upon the proper payments being made, and that an undisputed title could be given them. This was before the recent sale of the Fergundas farm to its present owners. On Monday, the 2d of May, six men while execting a derrick on the tract in question, were set upon by thirty and driven from the lease. No reinforcements were sent for, but the purchasers of the land from the State declined to fight for the poecession of the same, and the counsel for the owners of of the Fergundas farm proposed an amietable adjustment of all difficulties, which was accepted. Hickory well, was struck day before yes-terday upon the Dalzell farm, near Petroeum Centre. It is known as well No. 2, and for the twenty four hours ending Monday noon had produced 359 barrels of oil; it had been pumping four hours pre vious to time of measurement. The flow of gas, which was at first very weak, has increased constantly, and up to eight o'clock last evening there was no apparent diminution in the yield of oil Numerous admiring visitors paid their respects to the new strike yesterday afternoon, and with a new American flag flying from the top of the derrick, it was an object of general interest to passengers over the Oil Creek & Allegheny River Rail-

TABLE CUTLERY,

SEWING MACHINE Its merits are too well known the world over to need comment. We would just say that these Machines have lately been improved such agreed greaterner to Family Sewing, doing now a much greatername of work than any other Machine in market. They are now made of hardened steel, which makes them more durable than other machines. There is no machine sold that is its superior, as hundreds that have purchased in Titusville and vicinity, in the last few months, can testify. Sold in Titusville, only b N. G. HARKINS,
